Chapter 1 by R

She slipped away from the city, in to the trees of the park, footsteps light. Her toes curl up in the grass, her bare feet glad to no longer be on pavement. She tugs at the sleeves of her hoodie. The clothes are to odd here.

She knocks against the tree, a complicated pattern, that follows in with a whistling song. She turns around as the trees open up in a swirl of color, and she steps through to a place that isn't in the park. Isn't anywhere.

The hoodie and jeans are shed for a long flowing dress in orange and white. Her short hair grows longer and blue. This isn't her typical appearance. She's used to short tunics, short hair. Someone has reverted her enchantments. And she knows who.

"Oberon!" She yells out, angry, to stare at the king of the elves who stands to the side here in the mystic grove. "Why! Why are you doing this?"

There are others of the fae, staring at her with gasped voices. This isn't a common occurrence and fairies are flighty beings. They forget. But no one speaks to their king like that.

She sighs and follows, deliberately letting her long flowing dress drag through the mud. So this is how it will be then, is it?

Chapter 2 by Brady B.

They lead her into a room 10 stories high, there where rows and rows of huge shelf's. She looked around unamused, Because she has seen this room many times before, it was the statue room. Each shelf held multiple statue of all of the previous kings of the fairies.

The only thing out of the ordinary, was an elf was in the middle of the room, "Why is there and elfish boy in here?" She stared blankly at him. He had black hair and brown eye's, which was strange for an elf, he looked to be about 16. He was wearing a black hoodie and some black jeans, his hands where in the pockets of his hoodie.

The elf opened his mouth, but Queen Titania cut him off, she made a gesture to him and said elegantly "This is Zero."

"Who is he?" she said and tilted her head.

"Zero here," Titania continued. "Is the one who's going to help you break in to the Unseelie court."

"The Court?" Seraphina asked, raising an eyebrow. "What the hell would I want with them. No offense, Tania, but I've always been the one to say let's all get along."

"Zero, can you tell Sera what you told Oberon and me?" Titania asked, and the boy muttered.

"I'm a - what do you call it, cross?" He said, and Sera stared at him. "You know. Humans turned in to elves or whatever? When I died there were all these weird looking people in gray who asked me if I wanted another chance, and seeing how I died I said sure."

humans. I know you're using me for this because I won't back down."

"That's more true than you know." Oberon mutters, earning him a confused glance. "We need someone that the court won't expect as falling, and given that no one knows are friendship they wouldn't expect a thing, but someone who understands magic and crossing to a dangerous degree."

"Blah, blah, blah. I'm you're only candidate." I mutter. "Come on, Zero. We'll head out on a mission in the morning. First, I need to grab some snacks. You ever had elvish food before?"

Zero shook his head, and left the room after her. Oberon and Titania shared a short glance.

"This plan of yours, I hope it works. No harm must befall her." Oberon says softly and darkly.

"Don't be ridiculous Obie." Titania says with a grin. "When have I ever done anything against her wishes?"

Chapter 4 by Rodríguez Ortiz Ra

Sera didn't return to the humans that night, she stayed and at first time in the morning she was on the road to the Unseelie court with Zero.

"How does it feel? To die I mean"; she asked him.

"Are you always this direct".

"Only when I'm blue haired"; she fake-smiled.

"So, your not always blue haired?".

"Nah, they need me to look like this because the Margens like beautiful sparkling virgins. Let me tell you something, the Margens aren't good people, if they turn you into a cross is because there's something bad happening. If things get bad just run, I can defend myself"; for a second she looked older, like a warrior, then his silly personality came back.

"How old are you?" he asked sitting in a rock, trying not to watch

"I'm 706, yeah I know, I'm too young to be an adult elf and too old for a human, it blows. And you?"

"I died at my 18's but that was two years ago so I suppose I'm 20?"; he looked much more younger now.

"Really? you look like a baby, I would say 13 or 12"; she laughed and then screamed. Something took her by her feet and put her into the water.

"Sera?! Sera are you ok?"; Zero took his shirt off and dived into the water. The time got weird and he felt the space changing. He couldn't swim, he was paralyzed after a moment he achieved to get out of the water and he was confused, now he was inside a pitch black water in a pitch black black hole.
